SYNOPSIS

January 2016. The love story that brought me to this village in Alsace where I live ended six months ago. At 45, I am now alone, without a car, a job or any real prospects, surrounded by luxuriant nature, the proximity of which is not enough to calm the deep distress into which I am plunged. France, still in shock from the November terror attacks, is in a state of emergency.

I feel helpless, I suffocate with contained rage.

I am lost and I watch four to five films a day.

I decide to record this stagnation, not by picking up a camera but by editing shots from the stream of films I watch.

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

As a spectator, I have always been sensitive to the poetry of shots which, once isolated, no longer betray their origin. Shots of clocks, windows, keys, screens, furniture, traffic signs, cogs, keyboards, vegetation, landscapes but also face shots, those of extras suddenly isolated for editing purposes and that we never see again in the film.

Through a mashup, I have tried to bring together this type of mute shots, to claim their heterogeneity, to alternate black and white and colour, to respect their original format and to make them dialogue with the evocation of the dark days I lived through in 2016. To create a reflexive dynamic for the audience, to constantly play with the gap and correspondence between what they see and what they hear.

But all this may be nothing more than a discourse on the method, an attempt to establish a rule of the game, a temptation to theorize a deep urge. The idea was above all to recreate a cry, to express anger by the collusion of the chronicle of my despair with images from another time and space that nevertheless commented on my daily life, embodied it better than my own images could have done. Images and words that express my inner turmoil, my helplessness, my dereliction. My fear of the social, police, economic, ideological, human violence actively at work today in my country, France and throughout the world. Thinking that I had to utter this scream so I wouldn't suffocate.
